This multi-disciplinary conference focuses on the long-term (1850-2010) history of migration movements to and from Europe. The contributions deal with the past and current impact of population flows on origin and destination countries. Various perspectives are used: micro- and macro-economic effects, cultural and social issues (involving integration), resistance to assimilation, etc. The concluding round-table will evaluate if lessons can be learned from our experience in the past to help us face and integrate current and future immigrant flows.

Scientific Committee:

Francesca Fauri,
Paolo Tedeschi,
Elisabetta Tonizzi
and Vera Zamagni
